TRUBE acoms every likelihood that full compensation will spon be paid by Chica for the damage done during the recent riots. The French claims at Wuhu are said to have been siready settled and the other colaims will likely be adjusted as amicably. The Treaty Powers, however, will find it a more difficult job to persuade China to open Hunan and they doubtless will be informed that it is an inopportune time to seek an extension of the foreign field China when so many nations are following the example of the United States in their treatment of Chinese emigrants. China too weak, too incoherent to be able to protest effectively against the bad treatment of her subjects, but the conduct of the Americans, who have shown hopeless incaconciny in dealing with Chinese, has not been observed with indifference. Meantime the Government at Peking seems to have partially realised the danger of allowing mob law to rule unchecked. The feeble control over unruly subjects which the vicaroys, governors and their subordinates exercise was demonstrated during the recent troubles, as it has been demonstrated in the past, times without number. It is said the Manchu rulers are beginning to think that the ability to write beautiful proclamations, ornamented with quotations from the classics, is not the most fitting qualification for a governor of a province, the people having the habit of treating the proclamations according as their designs or passions urge them. A tendency favour of military governors. The Manchus soom to be sirnid uf an outbreak against their sutherity and would fain tighten the reins. The appointment of a Manchu as Throne from H.E. NG CHI KIU AND OTHERS U. NG WOOM BOOM

The plaintiffs in this suit, Ng Chi Kiu. Ng Pak Man and Ng Chung Man, who deplared themselves to be the descendants of the first, third, fourth, sixth and seventh sons of Ng Tun Yuen (commonly known as How Que), sought to have it declared that they were interested in common with the defendants No Woon Soon, Creasy perty of the late firm of Russell and injunction restraining the defendants otherwise dealing with the property, and to appoint a receiver. In reply Measts Ewens and Reeco wrote ' We hasten to assure you that your clients have not the slightest interest in the properties held by Mr J. M. Forbes of New York upon certain trust for persons named in the trust deed, one of whom is, Ng Woon Soon. We presume that you refer in your letter to this property and that your clients are Ng. Pak Wan, Chung Man, Tez Kiu and Pok Chun, as these gentlemen called at our office yesterday with Ng Woon Soon. They were, however, informed that the trusters would hold the property upon the trusts declared and that they (your clients) were not personally interested. We may as well inform you that under the trust deed No-Woon Boon has the first life interest.

In an affidavit by the plaintiffs it was set forth that How Qua, before his death in 1843, entrusted to the then members of the firm of Russell and Co. large sums of money upon which the firm paid interest from time to time to the various persons who represented the How Qua family. this interest in the year 1881, an that his father was then handed an acone of the partners of Russell and Co. showing that the firm was indebted to the million dollars or that they had prope ty in trust for the How Qua family to that value. The plaintiff further stated that between the years 1878 and 18-1 the firm Qua family 839,000 a year, and from 1832 to 1890 $45,0 0 a year. The last two sums received amounted to $9,000 each, both of which were received this year, the second Mr Drummond said he thought an ex-

One subject now attracting considerable attention among the real investors whose aupport is essential to the success of every commercial and industrial undertaking with capital in shares, is the high range of prices of the shares most suitable for investment purposes. Theoretically, it is immaterial whether the shares be of an original value of $1,000 or $10, but prectically the higher prioud shares, if the undertaking prospers, soon attain a value that places them beyond the reach of the investor of pursonal eavings. In dealing with this subject there is a strong desire to avoid invidious references: but as an illustration or two cannot be omitted, the institutions to which allusions must be made will be those which, enjoying the confidence of the public, are of Changking has done. not likely to be affected by impartial criticism.

The Nientze efter over-running and devastating many cities. at last made their appearance before the walls of Kosza with a free of many th mands. The magist ate was in terrible perplexity. He had no soldiers, no money at hand, but he was equal to the emergency. He sent out a proclamation calling for volunteers and offered his daughter to any man who would scoure the safety of the city. Now or never was the opportunity Chang Yao so longed for. He presented himself at the yamen backed up by 500 of the worst characters, but all death-despising men. He signed the contract and swore to never permit a single Nientze to enter the city gates as long as he breathed. For the first time he showed his soldierly qualities. The city was assaulted night and day. Chang Van repelled every attack, ming the continued capacity of the Co to never knew sleep, rest, or food for many a pay a dividend of not less than $150,00 day, and never finched. to join in the conflict, Chang Yao beat the drum to gather his amin't but courageous band. He addressed them as follows: Know that you are the lowest soum, but by your bravery you have become superior o the best this city contains. Holosis at hand and our services will be in longer valued, unless we prove unrecives as good walls : and what is the use of becoming our engines? Now follow me and show rushed after him through the gates, which were thrown open without the magistrate's permission, and fell pell-mell on the unperformed between Chang Xno and the magistrate's daughter, the decoration of rank, and Shen Pao sitting in the chief guest's chair drinking copiously. The military career of Chang Yao began by his following the banners of Shen Pac with his 500 comrades. We find him next occupy. ing the magistracy of Kuszo, the rest of himself at that time, and won a glorious name at a ruler. Rapidly he advanced until we see him Provincial Treasu are of Honan, when an unexpected misfortuna forced him to turn once more a suldister ceed to the north-west with the rank . I promotion from the Treasurorship to the rank of Lieutenant-General was in reality degradation. Chang Yao pleaded sickness and begged permission to retire. A severe Edict reprimanding him for ingratitude and conferring upon him the rank of Clenera and the Commission of Deputy Imperial Commissioner for the New Dominion compelled him to start for new scence. Long years were passed in these beak and deserted regions, when the Seventh Prince recalled him to Peking at the head of his own army 11,000 strong, to defend the Imperial seat, as there were remours about the French intending to make demonstrations at the northern port. The scare passed away and Chang Yao was appointed Governor of Kuangai. But Prince Chun detained him. He stayed in the metropolis and was instructed to deepen the city mosts and water courses. The soldiers performed the work, which was rapidly completed. Who knows but the great rapidity, engineering skill, and scientific observation displayed by Chang Yeo in executing this piece of work had to a certain extent influenced the Prince with the idea that he was a fit personage to take pare of the Yellow River, and ultimately procured for him the Governorship of as a matter of course were good.
